LEARNING ACTIVITIES AND METHODOLOGY

The teaching methodology purpose is to follow the Bologna's model (continuous assesment). The theoretical knowledge acquired is perfeccioned and deepen in the reduced classes (Knowledge is knowledge). Interconnection is looked for between theory and practice. The tutorial regime will be that of the University. Teaching activities will be the usual of the theoretical and reduced classes, combining different teaching methods. To this effect, together with practical case method, other techniques could be used as the following: assisted readings, workshops, debates, films etc.. One can include specialized videos, the medias reports, institutional webs of States, International states organizations, NGOs etc.. In the cronograma some activities would be given, but the professor responsable can change one activity for another. The cronograma can be applied with flexibility and, in any case, it is necessary to adapt to the teaching dynamic. For example, the theoretical and reduced classed should always be coordinated between the professors.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

% end-of-term-examination/test:	50
% of continuous assessment (assignments, laboratory, practicals...):	50

The knowledge will be evaluated through the active participation of students, by controlling reading, performing works and execution of exercises and case studies.

Each teacher will set a compulsory minimum number of practices without whose completion the student will not pass the continuous assessment. The marks of continuous assessment will be as following: 3 points from different elements within continuous evaluation; 2 points continuous evaluation test/exam.

There will be a compulsory theoretical exam (5 points) at the end of the program. This exam will consist of four questions, given by the coordinator or the responsable delegate, that only two questions can be answer by the student in one our. The minimal marks exigible to pass the final exam is not less than 4 points. Any student that does not have four pints will be failed. Alternatively, authorized by the coordinator, it can be an examination test.

The evaluation of knowledge acquired by the students will be done by the lecturer who has been responsable for the continuous assessment, with the objective to obtain the most adequate relation between the practical and theoretical knowledge assimilated. Students evaluation can also be done by the professor (of theoretical)
