LEARNING ACTIVITIES AND METHODOLOGY

The face-to-face lectures will expand on the study of the subject main contents, with professor explanations and comments on regulatory, jurisprudential and academic texts. Some other lessons will be totally or partially devoted to solve practical cases.

The subject coordinator as well as the rest of the professors involved in the teaching will establish a schedule for tutorial meetings, during which some problems of constitutional interpretation could be tackled, and the study of the institutions focused in this subject could be expanded, especially for the students not having previous juridic competences.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

% end-of-term-examination/test:	90
% of continuous assessment (assignments, laboratory, practicals...):	10

Students will be required to produce a guided academic paper about one of the subjects proposed by the subject coordinator. The academic paper will be no more than 9000 words long and will be handed over to the subject coordinator in Word format by e-mail not later than the date previously established. The mark obtained for this paper will represent the 90% of the final mark. The other 10% will depend on the attendance and degree of involvement during the lessons

In the resit students will have to develop a work with the same characteristics
