LEARNING ACTIVITIES AND METHODOLOGY

The training activities will combine lectures, classroom practice, independent work individually and in teams, and the readings.

The theoretical content presented through lectures will actively work through readings and class discussions. Part of the theoretical issues are discussed through examples, case studies and practical exercises of various kinds. Thus, students become familiar with the effective use of social research techniques, both quantitative and qualitative.

The practice sessions are conducted using data from surveys conducted by the National Institute of Statistics (INE) and the Center for Sociological Research (CIS), among others

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

Active participation in class, assignments, readings and a final exam.

The total practical work receives a score of 50% of the final grade. Through the final examination of the theoretical part of the subject is obtained the remaining 50%.
