Department assigned to the subject: Communication and Media Studies Department

Coordinating teacher: LUENGO CRUZ, MARIA

Type: Compulsory ECTS Credits : 6.0

Year : 3 Semester : 2

REQUIREMENTS (SUBJECTS THAT ARE ASSUMED TO BE KNOWN)

News reporting
Interpretative journalism
Investigative journalism

OBJECTIVES

The subject Social Journalism pursues the following objectives:

a) Knowledge

1. To introduce the field of journalism specialising in social issues and approaches to information, its themes, perspectives, sources and main actors.
2. To critically reconsider this field in order to detach it from a set of topics and to reformulate it as a proposal for revitalisation and improvement of the journalistic profession.
3. To bring students closer to the recent social history of journalism in order to point out the main milestones that have marked journalistic activity in close association with organised civil society, the needs of vulnerable groups for reasons of identity, gender, class or dysfunctionality, and recent citizen sensitivities.
4. To become familiar with basic sociological concepts in order to understand the implications and scope of journalistic coverage of realities that more directly involve citizens and social movements.
5. To become familiar with the main professional codes that regulate pluralistic news coverage of social groups and vulnerable collectives.
6. To discover new trends in the renewal of professional conventions that intensify the social commitment of journalists, while at the same time preserving a rigorous and honest professional approach to the facts.

b) Skills

1. Develop the analytical ability to recognise and describe the relationships that journalists establish with the different agents interacting in the social sphere, from an organised civil sphere to unstructured social collectives and individual citizens.
2. Apply perspectives that open up journalistic work towards the recognition of new and varied social communities.
3. Know how to apply the professional criteria and journalistic techniques necessary to approach stories with social sensitivity.
4. To foster habits of planning, organisation and teamwork oriented towards the journalistic production of content with social empathy and high quality standards.
5. Encourage journalistic curiosity and stimulate creativity to discover and tell relevant and original stories with social sensitivity.

c) Learning outcomes

1. Knowledge of trends and good practices of journalism with social identity.
2. Analytical ability to assess content and social approaches in the different platforms and formats in which journalism is done today.
3. Assimilation of the informative keys that make it possible to capture significant stories, interpret them and narrate them in different forms of journalistic discourse.
4. Creation of stories in the context of a journalism with a social identity, which is struggling strongly among the many new initiatives that are currently leading the digital reconversion of the journalistic profession.

5. Experimentation with new concepts and methods for the design of news coverage that connects people's lives with macroeconomic structures, and proposes journalistic forms that promote solidarity and equality between groups.

CONCLUSION

LEARNING ACTIVITIES AND METHODOLOGY

The course combines theoretical (3 ECTS) and practical (3 ECTS) teaching. The former, lectures, focus on conceptual development and critical reflection on the content of the programme. The practice sessions consist, on the one hand, in the analysis of case studies based on academic publications and journalistic content related to the syllabus, and, on the other, in the construction of informative and interpretative stories on social issues, according to the basic principles to which the different contents of the course respond. During the different weeks of the course, the teaching staff will combine the explanation of topics in the syllabus aimed more at theoretical conceptualisation with sections of the same aimed at practical learning and the application of techniques.

Throughout the four-month period, students will have to complete the following assignments, which will count towards the final mark for the course:

- Journalistic documentation
- Interview with social content and/or focus
- Podcast or video
- Written or transmedia feature

These activities will be carried out in groups of three to four students, and will revolve around a social journalism research project involving all the students on the course.

In addition to actively contributing to the classes, students are required to carry out various exercises in the analysis and production of journalistic materials that will be proposed during the practical classes.

Students will also receive individual attention from the teacher through tutorials. As this is a 6-credit course, students will dedicate at least two hours per week, at least according to the regulations of the Universidad Carlos III de Madrid.

Finally, students will have to participate in social journalism workshops with specialised journalists. These workshops are included in the weekly plan of training activities. The journalists invited may vary according to the academic year, the current agenda of social issues or other logistical factors such as the availability of the speakers.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

The final grade is obtained as follows:

Final exam - 40%. The completion of this final exam is compulsory. The student must obtain at least 2 points to consider the minimum performance in the study as accredited.

Continuous assessment - 60%.

The continuous assessment mark is calculated on the basis of the practices that mark the milestones of the social journalism work or project, the weekly practical exercises and the attendance and participation in class. The value of each item in the continuous assessment as a whole is as follows (the tutor may modify the percentages, content and format of the deliverables to adjust them to the group in question):

Project approach / documentation - 10%.

Final project (part 1) - interview - 20%.

Final project (piece 2) - podcast - 20%.

Final project (piece 3) - written or transmedia report - 30%.

Practical exercises - 10%

Attendance and participation - 10%

TOTAL 100% OF THE TOTAL

% end-of-term-examination:	40
