- Ability to understand the relevance of individual beliefs and convictions in the legal system
- Ability to locate cases of conscientious objection
- Ability to resolve conflicts between individual beliefs and convictions and private law regulation
- Ability to resolve conflicts between individual beliefs and convictions and public law regulation
- Ability to resolve conflicts between individual beliefs and convictions and legal duties

DESCRIPTION OF CONTENTS: PROGRAMME

Globalization, multiculturalism and public liberties.

1. Freedom of thought and conscience, personal identity and multiculturalism.
2. Freedom of conscience and freedom of behavior.
3. Globalization, multiculturalism and public freedoms in labor relations.
4. Immigration, integration and citizenship.

LEARNING ACTIVITIES AND METHODOLOGY

This course should be particularly dynamic, due to the subjects studied and the numerous court decisions and controversies that have arisen around them in the media. For this reason, the dynamics will be to deliver teaching material to students regularly, in order to prepare exhibitions, which will be discussed in class.

To facilitate the work of the students will be a voluntary group tutoring session in order to meet the concerns or make it easier for students to obtain the materials they need.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

The evaluation will be performed according to two parameters:

- 1) A final exam: one written work related to the contents of the program (60% of the final grade).
- And 2) continuous evaluation of the work done by students throughout the course shall be 40% of the final grade.

Extraordinary call: Same criteria as in the ordinary evaluation, but the student may replace the qualification of the continuous evaluation by a research directed by a tutor.

% end-of-term-examination:	60
-----------------------------------	----

% of continuous assessment (assignments, laboratory, practicals...):	40
